A Dynamic Team Achieves Timeless Designs

By Marylene Vestergom

For Carey Mudford, being an interior designer has always been her career plan. And with 17 years of experience, she has not looked back.

"I am very satisfied with my career choice, as it involves working with people to create their 'dream home,' and our work at CMID is always appreciated by the people that we work with," says Mudford.

A testament to Mudford's success is recognizing the efforts of her team who bring the same passion and love to their work every day. "We take each day at a time, venting about little situations that have occurred that day that will be forgotten tomorrow, and laughing at ourselves for embarrassing moments during a site meeting. We commit 10 to 12 hours of each work day to our jobs, and we love every minute of it."

Since 1995, CMID has carved out its niche in the industry specializing in custom homes. "We do not limit our clients by designing only a certain look or style. We understand that a family's home should suit their lifestyle. In every home that we design there is a theme of classic, timeless style, tailored to the taste of the client. The basics of a home should not date itself, such as the cabinet style, the tile selection or in the choice of plaster mouldings, etc. After all, a house with a simple, elegant look can be easily updated by repainting a room or by adding a few new colours in the accessories or furniture."

The success behind CMID is in its offerings and the people behind the name. By providing complete design services, Mudford and her team can work with the architect and builder from the start, providing input onto the layout of the home, room sizes, etc., while the project is still in its conceptual phase.

Acquiring a reputation is of keen importance in this very competitive marketplace, and referrals are a sign of success. CMID is known in the industry for being dependable, efficient, professional and easy to work with, and these impressions are worth their weight in word-of-mouth advertising.

“It is imperative to have a good resource of trades and suppliers, because our design is only as good as the person who eventually executes them. We respect the people we work with, and it is our experience that the respect is reciprocated.”

In an industry which is so dependant on the relationships established with previous clients, architects, builders and tradesmen alike, Mudford, along with her associates, Jessica Helps, Raphael Gomes and Alicia Squires, share the same passion towards their work and respect from those they work with.

“We make a dynamic team. We’re all individuals, all friends and co-workers.”

At the end of the day, it’s about the work and the people. “It’s rewarding when you’re working with people who are excited about their house, and they feel good about the way things are progressing.” It’s a business where a collaborative effort is important to achieve the end results. For Carey Mudford, it’s the work that drives her, and in doing so, keeps the standards of CMID high.
